Located in the centre of Belfast, BBC Northern Ireland Studio A is Northern Ireland's largest purpose built television studio.

With 500m² of available floor space the studio can be used for live or pre-recorded programming. Studio A is equipped with motorised scenery hoists and lighting barrels. It also has a drive in loading dock with onsite parking which makes for ease of materials handling. Studio A has a remote controlled retractable seating bank that can accommodate 300 people. Studio A has been used for sitcoms, drama, light entertainment, orchestral performances, current affairs, news, children's programmes, an election hub, chat shows, radio programming as well as providing a space for non-broadcast events.

There are seven dressing rooms available, a costume room with facilities, a large make-up room, a green room with audio visual equipment available, and kitchen facilities. The Blackstaff Audience Reception Area (BARA) is an ideal space for welcoming your audience and has full audio and video facilities available.

The television production control room for Studio A is provided by NI4, a comprehensive, high specification, multi-format, production vehicle. The studio also has a dedicated lighting control room, an executive viewing room and production offices.
