Nat: "Michael?"

Michael: "Yes!"

Nat: "Do you want to play a little game with me?"

Michael: "Yeah, why not, come on then!"

Nat: "Right I have picked out the weather conditions today in three European capitals. What do you think the weather's been like in London, in Madrid, and in Oslo."

Michael: "Ah! I'll say it is raining in London, it's been fine in Madrid and it's been snowing in Oslo."

Nat: "So would you like the answer?"

Michael: "I would like it, yes!"

Nat: "Well Madrid is having fine weather but it is cold!"

Michael: "It is actually quite cold."

Nat: "Minus one! You said that for Oslo it was..."

Michael: "snowing!"

Nat: "Snowing... Well I'll tell you: it's nice weather. We will finish up with London. So you said London was rainy."

Michael: "Well of course!"

Nat: "And so you see... It doesn't always rain in London!"

Michael: "So much the better!"

Nat: "It's just cloudy!"

Michael: "All the better for you... It's true that generally we have this image of London as always having rainy weather!"
